Corporation
bcorporation.net

A Benefit Corporation is a new type of corporation that is required to generate benefits for people and the planet. By law, Benefit Corporations make a commitment to protect their employees, the interests of the community and the planet when making decisions, even if those decisions are not the best for the bottom line. Benefit Corporations are held accountable by a third-party certifier that assesses the company's impact.

2021 Highlights

In the last year, Social Impact Architects engaged in multiple activities to generate public benefit and focused specifically on three areas: commitment to employees, the community and the environment. The following is a summary of the company's activities in those areas.

Commitment to our Employees

Social Impact Architects believes its employees as well as our full team of subcontractors are the company's greatest assets. They enable the company to provide high-quality, customized service to the nonprofit organizations, social enterprises and responsible corporations it serves. When the company hits certain financial targets, it also shares profits with our team through bonuses. In 2020, SIA established an Equity Statement to showcase our collective work on diversity, equity, and inclusion.

Commitment to our Community

While the company's core business is to help organizations serving poor and often neglected communities, Social Impact Architects also volunteers company time to work on issues of greatest importance. In 2021, the company provided pro bono services to various Dallas and Collin county collaborative projects. To ensure the next generation of social entrepreneurs is equipped to handle 21st-century challenges, Social Impact Architects also provided mentoring and career coaching to students and young professionals. To help promote the growth of diverse businesses, the company also sources from women- and minority-owned businesses—with a goal of doing so at least 50 percent of the time.

Commitment to the Environment

Social Impact Architects makes every effort to protect the planet and steward its natural resources wisely. The company purchases recycled and third-party certified products when possible. To minimize the impact of the company's transportation needs, Social Impact Architects carpools and offsets its carbon usage through the purchase of credits that support greenhouse gas emission reduction projects.
